I had joined the Communist Party in 1924. No one recruited me. I had become convinced that the society in which we live, Western civilization, had reached a crisis, of which the First World War was the military expression, and that it was doomed to collapse or revert to barbarism... In the writings of Karl Marx I thought I had found the explanation of the historical and economic causes of the crisis. In the writings of Lenin, I thought I had found the answer to the question What to do? (8)

As a student, [In 1923] I went to Europe. It was then shortly after the First World War. I found Germany in chaos, and partly occupied; northern France, and parts of Belgium were smashed to pleces. It seemed to me that a crisis had been reached in western civilization which society was not able to solve by the usual means. I then began to look around for the unusual means. I first studied for a considerable time British Fabian socialism, and rejected it as unvery much influenced by a book very much influenced by a book by called Reflections on Violence, by gun 1944 ති ස This is further to my memo dated 24.2.72. Subsequent investigation has resulted in our obtaining Jean DAVIAULT'S War Service file and the file covering his employment with Dominion Archives. Applicable sections of these files, pertaining to this investigation, have been extracted. It is of interest to note that while in the Navy DAVIAULT was charged twice for disciplinary reasons, having on one occasion, pointed a sten gun at a superior officer. He was examined by a psychiatrist in 1944 who remarked, "This man is a constitutional psychopath of the aggressive type and no doubt at first he was a very useful sailor, but one feels that his usefulness is practically at an end and no amount of discipline or treatment will be of much avail.

- 2. On the 29.2.72, Sgt. MacEWAN and I discussed this matter further with Dr. SMITH of the Dominion Archives. He added very little to what has already been reported, however, he did comment that DAVIAULT was a man who always appeared to have some big deal on the go; that he was an extrovert who liked to deal with people of higher rank on a first name basis and that he was quite capable with a camera, having studied photography. When considering the possible legal ramifications of this investigation, it was determined through Dr. SMITH that we could likely go back through Dominion Archives and pinpoint, with some degree of accuracy, what material had been microfilmed by DAVIAUIT. Although he was not absolutely sure, Dr. SMITH felt that the boxes containing that the microfilm should have on them DAVIAUIT's initials. On the question of the classification of these documents, Dr. SMITH said that the microfilm reels per se were not classified in the strict sense, however, much of their contents could be of a classified nature. Nevertheless, he said that regardless of the nature of the contents, the material being microfilmed was the responsibility of the contents, the materials change and they have been disclosed to Although containing responsibility disclosed to was tu should not have therefore, authority. tents, the mar Archives and, anyone without the of

well-built man who appears to be about his stated age of 26 years.

This man cannot be considered an emotional storm.

November 3, 19402can only be considered an emotional storm.

The immediate background seems to date from the sinking of the H.M.C.S. Windflower". Since that time this men has had less control of himself than previously. On the present ship the situation as regards his messmates has apparently been uncongenial. Any possible punishment will be useless in controlling the man's future activities and will serve the purpose of relieving him from ship duty at a time when he feels that he cannot stand the situation on board ship any longer. Diagnosis:

Simple adult maladjustment.

Disposal: May I suggest that if the intentions of any sotion which may be taken is to render this man useful at sea service that he be punished but that the punishment be nominal and that it be followed by at least 6 months inland in Canada. I believe that had not this lack of adjustment manifested itself as a disciplinary matter that he would have developed complaints as to his health and probably physical findings to justify them.

- I believe that an immediate return to sea duty would probably be dangerous either from further disciplinary difficulties or from the development of mental illness. જ
- In order to attempt to rehabilitate this man to Naval life could I suggest that he be drafted inland for 6 months on the completion of his sentence.

$ 2. At the outset, this item appeared to be of possible significance, particularly so since the literary executors of Mackenzie KING's estate reported that a portion of KING's diary could not be found after his death. This is recorded in the Mackenzie KING Record, Volume Three - Page 96.

"Mackenzie KING's diaries for the period from November 10 to December 31, 1945, could not be found after his death, despite repeated searches through all his papers. A skeleton record has been prepared from his engagement sheets and from record has Hansard."

In view of this possibility, investigation turned slightly away from the question of Samply determining the whereabouts of the missing portion of Mackenzie KING's diary, to the more important question of establishing the identity of 'Jean' and exploring fully the possibility of him being This new line of enquiry began with Mr. H. STEWART of the Prity Council office, who was contacted by Mr. STARNES and who offered us his complete assistance. Based on the criteria provided to him, Mr. STEWART produced the name of Mr. Joseph Adelard LACHAINE [DOB: 26 December 1898]. Mr. LACHAINE was known to his fellow workers as 'Jean'. He was a former member of the Prity Council Staff, having been in the Public Service from 1916 to 1961. On the 21st of February, 1972 I contacted Dr. Wilfred
Fhotocopy Unit in connection with the alleged leakage of MagKenzie KING and Privy Council material as recounted in Feter DENFSON's book Assignment Ottawa. I recounted the incident to Dr. SMITH who recalled that Dr. LAMB the previous Dominion Archivist had mentioned a similar incident to him in the past.
Around 1956 the Gentral Photocopy service became an alentity of its own. Up until that time microfilming had been done by the Repography Unit of the Public Archives under the direction of one Harcold Milk. The number two and the only other individual in this unit was a man named Jean DAVIAUIT. According to Dr.
SMITH's recollection DAVIAUIT came from the House of Commons staff circa 1956/51 and left the employ of the Public Archives circa 1954/55 to open an electrical shop on Dalhousie Street.
LAMB wherein Dr. SMITH remarked that due to the quantity of classified information obtained in the Archives it was amazing that point Dr. LAMB mentioned the occurrence involving DAVIAUIT wherein he was possibly informed by someone unnamed that the impression that no documents. Dr. SMITH is under the impression that no documents in effect were passed, however, he recalls DAVIAUIT making remarks such as "well would you like to know what the Cabinet didlast week". He further stated that at that time the Privy Council would send over the orders in Council passed each month for microfilaning and storage by the Public Archives. In addition the MacKenzie KING papers (a

The subject of this report came to attention through disclosures made in evidence before the Royal Commission. It was ascertained that there was an association between NIGHTINGALE, while a member of the R.C.A.F., and an Attache of the Russian Embassy in Ottawa extending to four meetings during the course of which NIGHTINGALE admitted discussing secret information. The Commission in summarizing NIGHTINGALE's position, stated that they were of the opinion that he not only agreed to furnish unauthorized information to the Russians, but actually did so. NIGHTINGALE also admitted improper a Russian improper documents. the opinion that he no unauthorized informati actually did so. NIGH retention of R.C.A.F.

He was charged with giving unauthorized information, but was acquitted in the first instance. Since the trial NIGHTINGALE has not come to our attention in connection with Communist activities or displaying Communist sympathies.

"NIGHTINGALE has associations with Durnford SMITH, Agatha CHAPMAN, Scott BENNING, Dave SHUGAR, Freda LINTON, Fred POLAND and H.S. GERSON. He also knew Fred ROSE and while he lived in Montreal before joining the R.C.A.F., he had met Sam CARR at a study group meeting. It was at the time when the Communist Party was banned and CARR was introduced to him under the name "Walter" which he knew was a cover name. NIGHTINGALE attended many study groups in Montreal, Pointe Claire and Ottawa and was definitely a Communist."

-'opération Diversion ?

Hier aux Communes, cétait à qui ferait le us vif éloge de la Gendarmerie royale du Cada. On le comprend aisément! Après avoit i instant redouté que les éclats du dossier ret "Featherped" ne fassent de sanglantes rimes au sein même de la chambre, la gent relementaire aura pousse un soupir de soulament en lisant les "révélations" du Toronto at. La capitale nationale en aura été quitte nu ment en bonne peur, comme si en somme les omesses du député Cossit n'avaient plus à se atérialiser, le "message" ayant été livré à n port.

Are neught, it is through a yan that a natural port and the probleme des dossiers secrets de la pocto es sur les hauts fonctionnaires et sur les onnes politiques n'est pas reglé pour autilit. De même, les louanges des deputés a prandroit de la GRC ne sauraient faire oublier, su que soulévent les activités des rivices de securité et de renseignement.

Tout en déclarant que le contenu du dossier res réparte pour cette raison le rendre public, le quointeux genéral du Capada n'a pas manque le préciser que l'opération entrait cette fois ans les attributions normales et légales de la RC. On ne peut en effet demander à la pocice de veiller à l'intégrité des institutions principaux les tous les activites des institutions principaux est de lournir des attestations de flavillité et de loyauté au sujet des institutions principaux services de sécurité des institutions principaux est de lournir des attestations de flavillité et de loyauté au sujet des institutions principaux estionnaires de l'État et en même temps retité des hommes politiques et de louges. De la même manière, on ne peut s'attendre ce que les policiers qui veillent sur la sécurité que la police — non gent et des hommes politiques et de leurs proches aient l'oeil ouvert sur les menaces potentielles et les deux yeux fermés sur certains faits plus délicats de leur vie privée. Il résulte de cette et surveillance et des enquétes spéciales commandées par la sécurité que la police — non gent en poorts que la récurité que la police en non seulement la GRC mais les autres services policiers, provinciaux et innunciations parfois fort embarrasantes sur les activités privées et le leurs proches fort embarrasantes sur les activités privées et le leurs proche dangereux mais pas difficile de tranclur. Voila qui justemant donne que la police de leur qui redouplent soudain de streit de leur les pourges de la policie deferale. Il pet la policie deferale. Il pet la policie deferale. Il pet la policie deferale. Il py a qui une fait une fait nas de doute que la policie que la po souvent meritee (encore que l'attitude de la GRC à l'égard de certaines minorités vaudrait la peine d'être vérifiée de plus prés). Il ne faudrait pas confondre, comme le public le faut spontanement, les célèbres "Mounties" qui portent secours aux populations josées et capturent toujours leur homme, avec les agents très speciaux des services de sécurité dont les métaits agritusits leurs progres çol-flegues de autres services de la GRC.

Les activités clandestines ou à toit le moins services ou confidentielles de la division SS ne sont pas toutes entachées d'illégalité. Toute-fois, ce qui a été révilé à ce jour de certaines opérations illégales, immorales, autidémocratiques et à tous égards intolérables pose des problèmes et des questions qui ne sauraient étre pudiquement voilés sous le manteau de la crédibilité genérale dont jouit le reste de la CRC dans l'ensemble du pays. C'est même à tort dangereusement à fort, que l'on invoquerrait l'image de la GRC et "le moral" de ses el-fectifs pour garder à l'abri du secret de l'Etat ou d'un huis clos d'une commission d'enquerrait l'image de la GRC et "le moral" de ses el-fectifs pour garder à l'abri du secret de l'Etat ou d'un huis clos d'une commission d'enquerrait l'image de la GRC et "le moral" de ses el-fectifs pour garder à l'abri du secret de l'Etat ou d'un huis clos d'une commission d'enquerrait l'inage de la GRC et "le moral" de sec el-fectifs pour garder à l'abri du secret de l'Etat lous insvouables de la GRC, le pouvoir que continus la capacitat de l'abritume l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'allement l'al d'en soustraire de larges morceaux à l'enquéte du commissatre Jean Keable, leur révélation fant redoutée n'aurait pas non plus jete la policier sen cause et leurs supérieurs n'auraient pas non plus jete la policier sen cause et leurs supérieurs n'auraient pas pris tant de précautions pour que nulle trace, nulle preuve ne puisse être retrouvée de ces "opérations".

Or, au lieu de vider l'abces, la GRC a entrepris d'en révéler le moins possible aux autosties civiles, leur faisant ainsi perdre ce qu'elles pouvaient encore garder de crédibilité à jouer à parails "cover-up". Ce que l'Opposition dit en effet du gouvernement vaut d'abord pour la GRC elle-même: si la direction ignopait ces "opérations", elle ne méritait pas la confiance mise en elle: si elle les ritait pas la confiance mise en elle: si elle les ritait pas la confiance mise en elle: si elle les ritait pas la confiance mise en elle: si elle les ritait pas la confiance mise en elle: si elle les roloferat, voire si elle les inspirait, elle subvertissait alors son mandat. Pareille situation ne peut être justifiée, encore moins tolerée.

Il est à cet égard troublant de voir soudain des opérations services trè spéciaux qui ont commencé de faire l'obje d'enquétes à travers le Canada, mais des ministres "seniors" mais des journalistes, mai des nouis fonctionnaires.

On croirait au déclenchement d'une opéra tion "diversions" nais des journalistes, mai des nauts fonctionnaires.

Featherbe

Three years ago when I was working as an MPP on organized crime I was told the story of the Featherbed operation by a member of the Justice Department. I did nothing with it at the time, but looking back I wish I had used my parliamentary immunity to break the story.

It all began with Igor Gouzenko in 1945. Prior to that Canada had no real secret service for the simple reason that we didn't consider that we had any secrets. When Gouzenko defected from the Soviet embassy and disclosed that country's massive spy operation in Canada which reached right into Parliament, the government decided to set up a secret service within the RCMP. It was first named S. & I (Security and Intelligence) which has. unfortunately, been re-named the SS (Security Service). The Job of S. & I (now the SS) was to gather files on Canadaians or foreigners in Canada who might be subversive or blackmailable by foreign governments. The members of RCMP security received training from experts in England and the U.S., and from that time on routinely gathered information on thousands of Canadians (my own file is two inches thick).

All this went along smoothly until Pierre

Elliott Trudeau joined the Liberal party and quickly became Minister of Justice. The SS were in total perplexity for their file on Trudeau bulged with evidence of his visits to Communist countries and sympathy with socialist causes. The file contained other material, far more delicate, which indicated he conceivably might become the subject of blackmail.

The RCMP perplexity quickly turned to extreme alarm when Trudeau ran for leader of the Liberal party and thereby Prime Minister of Canada. They responded to this perceived threat by leaking the portions of the file dealing with Communist who had become active in rightwing causes and who was associated with Ron Gostick of the Canadian Intelligence Service a strident right wing propaganda outlet in Flesherton. Gostick printed the material and it was widely circulated at the Liberal convention but it was rejected and in fact ignored because of its source. Trudeau won the convention and the matter was apparently forgotten but the RCMP did not destroy the file.

succeeded in suborning a member of the KGB, and among the goodies he handed over was information from the file on Trudeau, plus the incredible story that the Russians had got it from one of their Canadian agents, a senior member of the RCMP intelligence service.

The CIA were appalled, for Canadian and U.S. intelligence worked hand in hand and if our secrets were leaking so were theirs. So after going to the U.S. President, the CIA director was instructed to inform the head of the RCMP.

It was as a result of this intelligence that Leslie James Bennett, head of Canada's counter-espionage unit, came under suspicion and was grilled for four days. Bennett denied everything and there was not a shred of evidence against him. But he obviously could not continue in his post after the accusation, and he took refirement.

The disturbing question that remains is whether the secret Soviet agent in the RCMP's Security Service is stillin place reporting directly to Moscow.

has been that the CUPE local at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital has had its treasury looted. Thousands of dollars have mysteriously disappeared along with the corresponding bank statements and a large number of cheques. The officials of CUPE know who stole the money but they have been making strenuous efforts to keep the scandal away from both press and police using as their excuse their hope. "That the person who stole the money might be persuaded to give it back." The crazy thing here is that all the officials of the union are bonded and if CUPE had just notified the police they would have got their money back automatically.

The tragedy of the whole affair is that the members of this particular local are largely low-paid orderlies and nurses' aids to whom the loss is a tragic catastrophe. The union has known for six months that its treasury has been cleaned out but last week when I discovered what had happened, one of their officials phoned to shut me up. My informant at the hospital bitterly cried to me, "This is the second time this has happened. It's only two years since someone else cleaned out the treasury. Why don't the police do something about crooked union officials?"

OTTAWA — (UPLCP) — Prime wimister Pierre Trudeau personally ordered an end to the RCMP's secret "Operation Featherbed" in 1972 although he denied any knowledge of the operation this week, Conservative MP Tom Cossitt said yes terday

Cossit told reporters outside the Commons that "whether the request or order was followed, I don't know."

Cossitt said the important issue was "the solicitor-general" has said the operation was a proper investigation. Then why did the prime minister stop it? If it was being made in the interest of national security, why order it stopped?"

Cossitt said his sources also told him that Toronto journalists are being offered the file for $100,000 a copy. 'Informants say it was offered to one group for $200,000 and after they refused it was offered to another group for $100,000, and they also refused," he Simply, enemy intelligence agencies are overwhelming Canada's counter-espionage services with numbers. Russia's KGB, the committee for state security, has a half-million men. It can count on its Soviet block allies, particularly, Cuba in Canada's case, to provide thousands more.

Some of the men doing the dirty work distrusted headquarters, especially after Prime of Minister Trudeau started appointing civilian directors of the security service in 1699.

It is so secret that even Prime Minister Trudeau is not cleared to see the most highly sensitive information the CSE obtains.

And despite government assurances that Canada's intelligence network is strictly defensive, Canada in fact operates two offensive intelligence agencies abroad—one under the military, the other by external affairs. Given the nature of the world today—where spying, subversion and terrorism are linked—spying abroad is a realistic form of defence.

Perhaps it's understandable that Canadians are unaware of the secret was in our midst, given that Prime Minister Trudeau betrays similar naivete.

Solicitor-General Francis Fox confirmed yesterday that the RCMP security services have a file code named "Featherbed"

dealing with "extremely sensitive matters."

Replying to allegations by Conservative MP Tom Cossitt (Leeds) that the file contains surveillance reports on journalists and "one of the highest-ranking members of the cabinet," Fox admitted the file exists but refused to discuss its contents.

"It is not my intention to open up all the files of the security services no matter what the code names might be," Fox told the House. "I have had the opportunity to review the operation Featherbed" with senior officers of the service and I am satisfied it is a proper one for the service to be involved."

When Cossitt first made his charges in the House on Truesday, Prime Minister Truesday, Prime Minister heard of the file. Cossitt added no new information on operation Featherbed yesterday, but hinted: "I am informed it is far more extensive than I was able to indicate to the House (Tuesday)."

Fox told the House he would not be surprised if the RCMP had files on cabinet ministers. "I assume there are a number of the present cabinet," he said.
"A number of us were engaged in work in the Prime Minister's office before entering active politics and our employment there made it necessary that security clearance be obtained through the RCMP."

Fox was a special assistant to Trudeau from 1970 to 1972.

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Solicitor General I would like to direct my question to the Prime Minister. Will the Prime Minister tell the House what knowledge the government has of a security service file labelled "Featherbed", any part the government played in setting up that file and whether it includes details of surveillance of members of the news media and information about one of the highest ranking members of the government?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have never heard of it, but I am sure it is misnamed if it applies to the media. I am sure they are not featherbedders. I am surprised the hon member would repeat this calumny.

REQUEST FOR DETAILS OF FILE ON OPERATION "FEATHERBED"—POSSIBLE MAINTENANCE OF FILES ON PEOPLE IN PUBLIC LIFE

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General and it is in regard to the so-called "Featherbed" file in possession of the security services of this country. I am informed it is far more extensive than I was able to indicate to the House yesterday. Will the minister confirm with a "yes" or "no" answer whether or not there has been in existence or still exists a file with the code name "featherbed" which is in any way in the hands of the security services of Canada.

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Cossitt: I would like to ask the minister this supplementary: Is he prepared now to outline to the House the general nature of the subjects dealt with in this file?

Mr. Fox: It is a security service file dealing with extremely sensitive matters. It is not my intention to open up all the files of the security services, no matter what the code names might be. I have had the opportunity to review the operation "Featherbed" with senior officers of the service and I am satisfied it is a proper one for the service to be involved in.

Mr. Cossitt: My final supplementary arises out of a statement made by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce in Halifax and widely publicized today to the effect that be was positive that files were maintained on all those who are prominent in public life, particularly cabinet ministers. Is the hon. gentleman prepared to tell us whether this is true, whether it is government policy that this should be done?

Mr. Fox: I assume there are a number of files on members of the present cabinet. A number of us were engaged in work in the Prime Minister's office before entering active politics and our employment there made it necessary that security elearance be obtained through the RCMP.

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development). The Enoch Band have offered to provide the land on a lease basis free of charge, Parkland County has agreed to the project and so has the Enoch Band, however, because the classrooms are required at the east end of the county and there is a surplus of classrooms at the west end of the County; and because of a lack of justification for the seats required the Provincial Government is not prepared to proceed with the project at this time. Negotiations are continuing with the County and a student survey is being conducted. No date of final approval can be predicted; however it is anticipated that no decision will be reached prior to February.

Order Paper Questions

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): The Enoch Band have offered to provide the land on a lease basis free of charge. Parkland County has agreed to the preject and so has the Enoch Band; however, because the classrooms are required at the east end of the county and there is a surplus of classrooms at the west end of the County; and because of a lack of justification for the seats required the Provincial Government is not prepared to proceed with the project at this time. Negotiations are continuing with the County and a student survey is being conducted. No date of final approval can be predicted; however it is anticipated that no decision will be reached prior to February.

PUBLIC SERVICE LANGUAGE TRAINING

Question No. 3,491-Mr. Reynolds:

- 1. Approximately what percentage of the Public Service language training in (a) English (b) French?
  - 2. What is the average length of time such employees have spent away from their regular job on language training?

Miss Coline Campbell (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): I am informed by the Public Service Commission as follows: I. While figures are available in terms of total enrolments, statistically valid percentages of public servants on language training are not available in the form requested because: (a) Many of the course are cyclical in nature, with the carryover of students from year to year. (b) Many courses are part-time or special courses, operated privately or at the departmental level and also with carryovers into other years. Valid statistics (without carry-overs from year to year) are available only for continuous/intensive courses. From the inception of continuous/intensive courses in September 1973 to October, 1975, the following are the numbers involved: Courses in French, 6,820; Courses in English, 801; Total: 7,621.

Norm In 1974, there were 258,590 Public Service Employment Act.

2. The average length of time spent by public servants on continuous/intensive language courses is six months.

EXPORTS OF FOREST PRODUCTS

Question No. 3,510-Mr. Forrestall:

Is the government aware of the cost in 1974 of shipping by sea Canadian forest products to other countries and (a) if so, what was it (b) if not, for what reason?

Mr. Marcel Roy (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): The government has no official data or costs for 1974 of shipping by sea Canadian forest products to other countries. Details of shipping contracts are not required to be reported to any regulatory

Order Paper Questions

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): The Enoch Band have offered to provide the land on a lease basis free of charge. Parkland County has agreed to the project and so has the Enoch Band, however, because the classrooms are required at the cast end of the county and there is a surplus of classrooms at the west end of the County; and because of a lack of justification for the seats required, the Provincial Government is not prepared to proceed with the project at this time. Negotiations are continuing with the County and a student survey is being conducted. No date of that approval can be predicted, however it is anticipated that no decision will be reached prior to February.

2000 spokesman being formed right-wing, $

EROCKVILLE (CP) —
Tom Cossitt, Progressive Conservative MP for Leeds, says a group being formed within the Conservative Party cannot be considered right wing. He said the group intends "to return the party to Conservative principles."

The group will provide middle-of-the-road alternatives to the policies of the Liberal Government and of people in control of the Conservative carcuis, he said in an interview on Saturday.

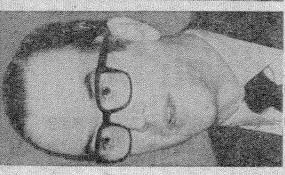

"There is a feeling that the six or eight people who now control the caucus and the party follow policies foreign to Conservative philosophy."

Mr. Cossitt said the group thinks people in control of the caucus represent a socialist approach to problems in the country.

Many caucus members feel the Conservative Party does not take appropriate stands on national issues such as relations with Quebec, national unity, foreign affairs, immignation and unemployment, he said.

He said the group was formed following a meeting five months ago with Sean O'Sullivan, Conservative MP for Hamilton-Wentworth, and Kim Abbott, a former deputy minister of immigra-tion.

He said that II members of Parliament attended the first meeting of the group two months ago and 28 were at the second meeting. Thirty-two of the 95 caucus members now are identified with the group, Mr. Cossitt added,

"We represent every province with the exception of Quebec."
He said two Quebec members, Claude Wagner (SaintHy a cinthe) and Heward Graffey (Brome-Missisquo), have not been approached because they apparently seek party leadership.

Mr. Cossitt said the group, known as the Chateau Cahlnet, will hold a meeting in Ottawa this week it is not intended to be a vehicle for a leadership candidate, he said.
Party Leader Robert Start field raised the issue at a pre-Easter cancus, asking the caucus to refrain from "secret meetings" and to cast their ballots for the leader of their choice at the next lead-ership convention, expected next spring.

He made his remarks after it became known that 2n members of the caucus had organized a meeting at the Chateau Laurier hotel to dis-cuss the best method of steer-ing the party toward a more traditional Concervative ap-proach in selecting a new feader.

Caucus sources credited.

Don Mazankowski (PC, egreville), the caucus chairman, with cooling out any potential blowup when he said that, with a leadership convention pending, if was inevitable that groups of MPs would meet to discuss strategy.

6. Contact between FRANK and CLAVIR began as early as 1943 when they worked on the staff of the "Modern Digest". There is no proof of communication between CLAVIR and FRANK until 15 July 1950 when FRANK was observed living at CLAVIR's residence, apparently on a temporary basis. We know from our files there was limited communication regarding films prior to this time. It was never definitely established that FRANK was obtaining films:

undeveloped leads resulting from GOUZENKO's defection. Consequently, our concentration has been to a greater extent on GRU operations. It is proposed that now, in addition to continuing our efforts in the GRU field, mainly through our Fred ROSE operation and current sources, we expand our scope and attempt to uncover any thread of MGB operations, began in the late 1930s or early 1940s which could lead us to current KGB penetration in high government circles. The rationale for this property is a follows. *ole.

4. A major target resulting from the MGB 1944 realignment was the United Nations. Beginning with a nucleus of an idea which developed at the Teheran Conference in November 1943, and which slowly took shape through the Dumbarton Oaks Conference (August to October 1944); the Yalta Conference (February 1945); the San Francisco Conference of April 1945, the U.N. came into being as the organization designed to maintain world peace. MGB intentions to use the U.N. as an intelligence recruiting ground is evident stages of the war the Soviet Intelligence community, particularly the MGB, was putting less stress on military targets and concentrating more on the recruitment of sources of political information. Assuming, as we must, that Canada was included in this Soviet reassessment one can readily see the importance of developing as much information as possible on MGB operations relating to this country during the late 1930s and early 1940s. Also, interest which the MGB showed in the U.N. in its formative stages emphasizes this importance since Canada, relatively strong and influential in international affairs in the closing years of the war and the immediate post war period, played a significant role in the establishment of the U.N. and its specialized agencies, consequently there was a sizable Canadian contingent with the U.N. tes that during tence community tark thoroughly as is possible at this proposal to examine as thoroughly as is possible at this somewhat late stage MGB activity relating to Canada in the closing years of World War II can be found in GOUZENKO's testimony before the Royal Commission in 1946. Pages 21 to 26 of the Commission report covers NKVD (MGB) activity and leaves little doubt that an extensive network was being operated in Canada by V. PAVLOV. This point is also made in GOUZENKO's General Report dated 11.1.46

- Report) "Prior to the arrival of the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa (1942) there was not in Canada an agency network of military intelligence, but only the network of the NKVD." (General Repo: (a)

- "While GOUZENKO's evidence and documents establish the existence of the NKVD organization in Canada, we have been unable to ascertain the extent of its infiltration and the identity of its Canadian or other agents. We have, however, sufficient evidence to show that the NKVD system is parallel to, but entirely independent of and quite distinct from the military espionage network. GOUZENKO stated in his evidence that the NKVD network was more extensive than that of Colonel ZABOTIN; that it had been operating much longer in Canada."

All of these pieces of evidence are sufficiently significant when viewed in complete isolation, however, when they are all pulled together the impact is far greater and certainly supports the hypothesis of high level MGB penetration in the Canadian Government. This, of course, leads back the initial proposal that we attempt to lift the curtian on Pactivity in Canada before, during and following World War II. Having outlined the proposal in principle and shown justification it, the next point to be covered is to spell out specific how we intend to deal with the problem.

From the vantage point of hindsight we can now why GOUZENKO did not single out any of these suspects as agents was that they were recruited and were being run by the MGB, and did not come within the GRU terms of reference. The aim of our present study of these suspects is to determine if indeed they were targets assigned, not to ZABOTIN and his MGB co-workers. 7. As per our discussion, I have documented my input into this investigation and am returning the file to you as requested. You recorded your personal feelings as being that DAVIAULT was somehow involved and in someway the key to the puzzle. I could not agree more. My efforts to form a link between have not been too revealing and in my personal opinion it will be even more difficult to form a link between them with an intermediary and support it with evidence of a concrete nature. There is already a great deal of circumstantial evidence but not conclusive unrefutable evidence.

Lawrence: Dear Mr. You will recall being generally briefed on the FEATHER BED of the Security Service, Chief Supt. DARE Director General of the Security Service, Chief Supt. SPOONER and S/Sgt. D. SMITH. At that time you requested further detail on the major areas of our investigation and the identities of the principal figures involved, particularly any who might still be serving in the Public Service of Canada.

Our investigation which commenced in March 1958 took several directions. First was a careful review of a number of known communist sympathizers employed in the Federal Government based on American and British experiences in this field. Second, was our attempt to identify a RIS agent this field. Second, was our attempt to identify a RIS agent on the basis of information provided to us investigation of

Finally our review led us to re-examine rovided to us by Igor GOUTENKO. Information provided information.

As the FEATHER BED concept enlarged and took these various directions the main file became simply a repository for general information and to record enquiries or publicity on the subject of FEATHER BED. Any ongoing investigation was carried out on individual files with other titles or code names. Attached as Appendix A you will find a chronological outline of the developments of our FEATHER BED concept which I hope will serve to fully acquaint you with our investigation to date.

RELEASE OF TASCHEREAU PAPERS

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister concerning recent statements attributed to him by the news media in regard to the release of the so-called Taschereau papers.

Is the Prime Minister now in a position to tell the House approximately when, or if, the papers will be released and whether there was really any legitimate statutory power for the former government not to release them after 30 years? Finally, was the non-release decision made in any way, according to investigations so far, to protect the interests of former Liberal governments?

(1440)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the comment that was attributed to me after a press conference in relation to those files followed a question put to me concerning two files, the Featherbed file and the Taschereau file. I indicated in relation to the Featherbed file that in our judgment it contained primarily gossip and was not a matter to which we intended to give credence by publication.

The question of the Taschereau file is still under consideration. We are looking at a way by which we can have a respected and independent review of the contents of the Taschereau file prior to coming to a decision on whether or not it should be published. 5 5 5 eur r In 1945, GOLDBERG obtained employment with the Department of Trade and Commerce as a Statistician. Enquiries made at that time were favourable. Updating enquiries were conducted in 1949 on behalf of the same department. Information concerning his attendance and activities at a conference of the Fellowship for a Christian Social Order in 1945, as outlined in our December 1962 brief, was forwarded to the Civil Service Commission and the Department of Trade and Commerce in February 1949. In October 1952, our file on GOLDBERG was reviewed with Peter DWYER, Secretary of the Security Panel at the request of Mr. PICKERSGILL. In 1961, a brief (copy attached) was forwarded to the Dept. of Trade and Commerce as a result of their request for a records check. December at (copy Commerce

NEITHER IT NOR ITS CONTENTS NOR ANY PART THEREOF IS TO BE FURTHER DISSEMINATED WITHOUT PRIOR CONSENT OF THE ORIGINATOR.

Howard Thomas PAMMETT Re: A witness testified before the Royal Commission on Espionage in 1946 that an employee of the Department of Labour by the name of Howard PAMMETT (believed identical) was, together with the witness and others, a member of a study group in Ottawa. According to this person, the study group met regularly every three or four weeks between approximately 1942 and 1944. The qualification for membership in this study group was an interest in Communist writings and teachings. The witness was subsequently convicted of espionage.

Dear Sir:

Your File No. Re:

I wrote you on July 16 concerning the information contained in your report with respect to Howard Thomas PAMMETT, an employee of this Department. I have had an opportunity since then to discuss the matter with Dr. Haythorne, the Deputy Minister, and he is of the view that in the light of all the circumstances no security risk will be involved in continuing Mr. Pammett in his present employment. Consequently, no further action is being taken by the Department as a result of your report.

The Department is convinced that the interests taken in the Communist movement during the periods in question by Mr. Pammett were entirely of an academic nature, and during his many years of service has left little doubt as to his reliability and allegiance to our democratic form of government.

Yours very truly,

Testimony by Agatha CHAFMAN and Kathleen WILLSHER, both of whom were charged in the Canadian Expionage Trials of 1945, indicated that PAIMETT had been a member of a Communist study group with them and other Communists during the 1940's. PAMMETT's name appeared in the desk telephone pad obtained in 1948 from Frances PARK, a prominent Communist and suspected recruiting agent for the Russian Intelligence Service. FALMETT's name also appeared in the telephone desk pad of Fred POLAND who was charged as a Soviet spy and appeared before the Royal Commission on Expionage in 1946.

Apparently when Trudeau won the Liberal Party's leadership nomination in 1968 several Nato intelligence agencies asked for a security check on the would-be prime minister. According to one Ottawa report Trudeau was cleared, but a host of unexplained coincidences farned up when other top officials were investigated.

That was the start of what is now called the Featherbed File and a constantly updated Operation Featherbed has uncovered 245 suspected members of the secret Communist Party International (CP). Most are lawyers, civil servants, awayspaper and television political reporters and agademics. Some are senior government advisers and two have risen to Cabinet level.

The greatest degree of communist infiltration, according to Ottawa sources, is in the Department of External Affairs which has been almost completely penetrated by KGB agents. From time to time there have been reports that up to five people of deputy minister rank and at least one. Cabinet minister could be underground members in touch with the KGB.

And it is thought that Featherbed figured

Much of this information has been relayed to both Trudeau and Prime Minister Joe Clark.

Both have been told that two extremely senior civil servants close to the government are thought to be CPI officers. However, the pair conlinue to hold their sensitive posts.

Canadian Mounted Police intelligence officers feel first potential or actual traitors are not weeded out because of a fear that such a move could trigger a witchlunt, an event feared by all the liberal media. Also, the Canadian Establishment tends to protect its own members rather like its British counterpart.

There are similarities between suspected Canadian and British Kota sgents. Their parents are usually rich, many are homosexuals end often they have been to private schools. As the Taschereau report noted: "Many of the Canadian public servants implicated in this eapionage network were persons with an unusually high degree of education...; and persons of marked ability and intelligence."

n Featherbed records security service has maintained detailed files on the personal lives of senior Government officials for more than 20 years in an attempt to determine whether any have been spying for a foreign power.

But Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence said yesterday he does not believe that the files, known as operation Featherbed, By ROBERT SHEPPARD Globe and Mail Reporter operation reauterbea, turned up any foreign spies or "moles" in the Canadian civil service.

In a brief interview outside the House Mr. Lawrence said he did not know what action the previous Liberal administration took on the file "but I think the (previous) Government rejected the advice" flowing from Operation Featherbed. The files, he said, "are mostly allegations and hearsay."

In the most detailed pub-lic statement so far on this subject, the Solicitor-Gen-operation Featherbed is "pretty well ancient history," but that, until a few years ago, detailed files were kept on "a great number of very high-rank ing Government officials," particularly those "who in their younger days may have had some connection with the Communist Party of Canada or groups like that."

He told Tory MP Thomas Cossitt outside the House that the Featherbed flie has been dormant since 1874 or 1875. And he told The Globe and Mail that the flie was directed at civil servants—politicians were mentioned only indirectly. Mr. Lawrence also maintains that Featherbed does not contain files on Canadian journalists, which is disputed by Mr. Cossitt, who claims to have inside information from security service sources.

Clark was asked in VanCouver yesterday whether he would make public the Featherbed file. "If there were public interest in knowing and not a security objection our inclination would be to publish," Mr.
Clark said but added, "we would not take a step which could be fairty interpreted as motivated by partisan considerations.")

The Featherbed file has been shrouded in secrecy tor a number of years despite repeated questions in the Commons by Mr. Cossitt. It surfaced again during the trial of The Toronto Sun under the Official Secrets Act, and in other evidence only recently during F an examination for discovery in a libel trial involving a former head of the A RCMP's counter-intelligence section gence section. Leslie James Bennett, who was director of the Russian desk of the RCMP's counter-espionage branch until he resigned in 1972, testified in Toronto during an examination for discovery that he first became aware of Operation Featherbed in 1955 shortly after joining the RCMP.

A member of British intelligence in the mid-1940s, where he had worked briefly with H. R. R. (Kim) Philby, the notorious double-agent who defected to the Soviet Union in 1963, Mr. Bennett testified that Featherbed was begun before 1955 and "was under almost continuous examination from that point on." He said the number of people working on the file varied but that there were "about four" RCMP security officials involved with the cials involved with the Featherbed file in the early 1970s.

JOURNAL REPORTER

The mysterious RCMP Featherbed File contains the names of a number of "very high-ranking government officials" who may have had connections with the Communist Party, the Commons was told yesterday.

The revelation, by Solicttor-General Allan Lawrence, shed new light on a murky puzzle being slowly pieced together with scraps of information from the secret RCMP investigations.

Although Lawrence said the file has been "dormant" for a number of years and is now "ancient history," Prime Minister Clark later said he might make the file public, provided security is not damaged.

Basic objective

Lawrence said the basic objective of the Featherbed File was the

"identification and neutralization" of any high level employee of the Canadian government who was then working as "an agent of any foreign power against the Canadian government."

The minister went on to explain that the file dealt with "the activities of several, or of many, high-ranking government officials of the day who, in their younger days, may have had connections with the Communist Party of Canada or other groups such as that."

Lawrence said he had no knowledge of any action being taken by the previous government.

Leslie James Bennett, 58, former head of "B" branch the security service's counter espionage unit, testified at a libel action hearing in Toronto last winter that, from 1955 on, the Featherbed File was under "almost continuous examination" oby the security service and four cinvestigators were involved in that job in 1970.

Cossitt raised question

The "elaboration" in the Commons was requested by Leeds-Grenville Tory MP Tom Cossitt. He also wanted to know if the file indicated neglect on the part of the previous Liberal government in dealing with the security risks it documented, but Lawrence ignored that question.

At one point, Cossitt had said at least six senior civil servants and a cabinet minister were suspected of espionage. He also suggested the file was an investigation of journalists covering Parliament.

A Toronto newspaper claimed some time ago that the file was started in 1968, the year Pierre Trudeau became prime minister, when the RCMP obtained information from the Igor Gouzenko spy case. Gouzenko was a Soviet cypher clerk who defected in Ottawa in 1946.

ministers could be questioned in the House about their actions in previous portfolios if parliamentary reforms tabled by the Conservative Government yesterday are implemented.

The proposals, presented by Government House Leader Walter Baker, would also give committees more autonomy in choosing the focus of their inquiries and provide a procedure for them to get extra funds for special investigations. At the same time, committee membership would be cut to 11 from 20.

The proposals would also shorten speeches in the House from 40 minutes to 20 minutes (except in special circumstances) and provide a full day of debate for selected private members' bills.

The Tories in opposition found considerable frustration in inability to question former solicitors-general (two of whom were still in the Cabinet) about alleged RCMP wrongdoing. The new proposal that would allow such questioning specifies that the minister to whom the question is directed must be the only one able to answer it. It also suggests that 24 hours' written notice be given. It would not allow questioning of former ministers no longer in the Cabinet.

The Government hopes the proposals reach committee before Christmas and that the committee will report back by spring so that the reforms can be implemented this session.

"urgent and pressing necessity" would be eliminated under the proposals, allowing question period to be extended to a full hour. The motions, which precede the question period, are to give members an opportunity to ask the House to debate an urgent matter, but have come to be used as a technique for voicing protests or venting anger.

The Government is also proposing that an adjournment motion be automatic to allow the House to adjourn at Christmas, Easter and the end of June, providing for the normal recess. This motion would come up for debate and a vote even if not called by the Government.

- 4. Will the government confirm beyond a doubt security services sources which state that the file does not contain the names of Members of Parliament, past or present?
  - 5. Is the government aware of the reasons why the former Prime Minister at first denied the existence of the Featherbed file, a former Solicitor General then admitted its existence in the House of Commons and whether or not the former government attempted to suppress information on the file?

-Mr. Cossitt-November 21

- 1. Is the government aware of a statement made in London, England on November 20, 1979 by Mr. Anthony Blunt, that the espionage ring with which he was connected could include as many as twenty people?

- 3. Have steps been taken or are steps being taken to determine whether or not any members of this alleged espionage ring were Canadian, or at one time lived in Canada or presently live in Canada and, if so, is a particular investigation being directed towards (a) an academic (b) a former member of the RCMP?

- 2. Is the government aware of a press interview given on or about November 20, 1979 by Mr. Ernest Volkman, a journalist in New York City, in which he stated that a Canadian who worked in British Intelligence at one time and later with RCMP Intelligence was the "6th Man" in the Philby-Burgess-Maclean-Blunt Affair and does the government have knowledge of any kind that this so-called "6th Man" could be Mr. Leslie James Bennett?

NATIONAL SECURITY

NATURE OF FEATHERBED FILE

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Solicitor General. It arises out of a question I asked the minister a few days ago regarding the "Featherbed File". At that time I think his answer was to the effect that the government was taking an extensive look at the situation. I should like to ask the minister if he is now in a position to make an elaboration on the nature of the file. In particular, does the file show neglect on the part of the previous governing dealing with certain matters contained therein?

Hon. Allan Lawrence (Solicitor General and Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the basic objective of the "Featherbed File" was the identification and neutralization of any influential person who was then working as a high level agent of any foreign power against the Canadian government—any high level employee of the Canadian government. That was the original objective of it. It is pretty well ancient history. It dealt with the activities of several, or of many high-ranking governmental officials of the day who, in their younger days, may have had connections with the Communist Party of Canada or other groups such as that.

I must stress that the file has been dormant for a number of years. As far as I know, no action was taken by the previous administration, or if it was I do not know what it was. Certainly there were files taken out on a number of very high-ranking governmental officials of the day. cials of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control of the control

The basic objective of FEATHER BED was the identification and neutralizing of any influential person working as a high level agent of the RIS agaimst the Canadian Government. With this objective as a starting point it branched out as each subject of investigation was handled on an individual file. By 1969 FEATHER BED had ceased to be an individual file and became dormant in 1975.

This would appear to be an appropriate time for the Solicitor General to call in Mr. Tom COSSITT and explain to him FEATHER BED is none of the things he envisages and advise him to start acting as a responsible member of the Government.

Featherbed

A former high-ranking security service officer who resigned seven years ago on medical grounds when he was 51 has cleared up some of the mystery surrounding his abrupt departure from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Leslie James Bennett, former head of counter-espionage, testified at a libel action hearing in Torouto this spring. His testimony has not been reported until now.

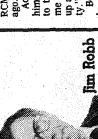

Bennett told the hearing that prior to his resignation later in 1972 he was interrogated for four days in March of that year by two counterespionage officers after being told questions had been raised about his loyalty.

Sung journalist

Bennett is suing fronto journalist lan Adams, author of the highly-successful novel, S.—Portrait of a Spy, which sold 39,000 copies in the first few weeks after it was published in November 1977.

The interrogation was carried out by then Superintendent Murray Sexsmith and another officer identified in the transcript of the libel hearing as Sergeant McEwan. After Bennett resigned he left Canada for South Africa and Australia.

He now lives in West Australia.

Sexsmith is now an assistant commissioner of the RCMP. He hedds "O" Division, with headquarters in Toronto. At the time Bennett was interrogated Sexsmith was head of "B" branch, a job formerly held by Bennett's testimony this spring shows he was interrogated by Sexsmith and McEwan in a security service "safe house," which he described as a comfortable apartment in an Ottawa high-rise building. When Bennett arrived for work Mar. 13, 1972, he was called into John Stames' office, he testified. Stames, who later resigned from the RCMP, was then director general of the security service. Starnes testified on RCMP dirty tricks at hearings conducted by the McDonald Commission inquiry into

RCMP wrongdoing few months ago.
According to Bennett, Starnes told in the that "certain matters had come to their attention and they wished me to undergo an interview to clear up any doubts concerning my loyal. if y." w months bennett, answering questions put by Adams layver, said the four-day interrogation which followed focused first on the political leanings of some members of his family as well as acquaintances in pre-war Britain and in the British Army during the Second World War.

Most of the questioning he endured centred on counter-espionage cases Bennett had been involved in "which had not developed in the manner expected." manner

'Purely voluntary'
Bennett describ.d his interrogana as "purely voluntary" on his part.

"If there were any doubts about my loyalty I wanted them cleared up," he said.
He described a number of cases in which he was involved as a counterespionage officer but refused to an.

sewer questions about others because of Canada's Official Secrets Act.

Bennett told the liberal hearing that he first heard of a mysterious RCMP file called "Operation Featherbed" in 1855 and that it had undoubtedly existed before then.

The last time Featherbed came up in public was in November 1877, shortly after publication of Adams; novel when the then solicitor-general. Francis Fox, admitted to 18 existence in the Commons after questions, from Leeds-Grenville.

Personal information

Fox admitted the file dealt with "extremely sensitive matters" and Cossist said he understood it contained personal information on politicians and journalists.

At the time, the MP also charged the government wanted Bennett out of the country in 1972 so he wouldn't have to answer questions about Featherbed.

For much of his RCMP career Bennett was in charge of the Russian Intelligence Desk and he told the libel hearing that one of the 'top priorities" of the Soviet KGB was infilitation of other intelligence services.

Bennett confirmed that up to this departure in 1972 the security service had caught only one "illegal" planted in Canada by the KGB.

He defined an "illegal" as a "Russian Intelligence Service officer who has been trained and documented to enter a country and perform expionage services, or sabortom, or other works under the guidance and instruction of his masters.

"He operates separately of the permanent mission, although the permanent mission, although the permanent mission, although the RIS do under most circumstances provide some support services," Bennett said.

Few caught

Bennett went on to tell the libel hearing that very few "illegals" have been caught anywhere in the West. He mentioned Rudolph Abel and Carl Tuoni in the United States, and Gordon Lonsdale, apprehend d in the United Kingdom.

Bennett said that from 1855 on the Featherbed file was under "almost continuous examination" by the security service. Four investigators were involved in that job in 1970. In his last two years with the RCMP Bennett was in charge of "E" branch which provided support services for the rest of the security service.

The central figure in S—Portrait of a Spy is a senior RCMP security service officer who is pursued by another RCMP man because he is suspected of being, first, a double agent working for Russia and, later, a triple agent working ultimately for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Bennett confirmed that up to this departure in 1972 the security service had caught only one "illegal" planted in Canada by the KGB.

"Russian Intelligence Service of ficer who has been trained and documented to enter a country and perform espionage services, or saborage, or assassination, or other works under the guidance and instruction of his masters."

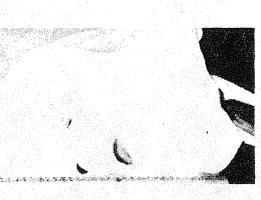

"He operates separately of the permanent mission, although the permanent mission operatives of the RIS do under most circumstances bennett said.

Bennett went on to tell the libel heating that very few "illegals" have been caught anywhere in the West. He mentioned Rudolph Abel and Carl Tuomi in the United States, and Gordom Lonsdale, apprehended, in the United Kingdom.

Bennett said that from 1955 on the Featherbed file was under "almost continuous examination" by the security service. Four investigators were involved in that job in 1970. In his last two years with the RCMP Bennett was in charge of "E" branch which provided support services for the rest of the security service officer who is pursued by another RCMP man because he is suspected of being, first, a double a gent working for Russia and, later a triple agent working ultimately for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Defection started inquiry

By The Canadian Press: Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence said Tuesday the government is giving serious consideration to making public secret documents arising from a 1946 royal commission dealing with Russian spies in Can-ed to the Taschereau commission when it investigated the Gouzenko spy affair in 1946, have been in the vaults of the National Archives since then. The documents, present-

They were to be released in 1976, but the former Liberal government ordered last year that they be withheld from public view for another 10 years. The decision was taken to protect the privacy of some individuals.

Lawrence told Conservative MP Tom Cossitt in the Commons he is investigating the legality of the decision that sent the papers back to the archives.

"I'm not going to let this thing slide," he said

Cossitt asked the solicitor-general to consider a review of the Liberal government decision, which he said was ordered by Michael Pitfield, former clerk of the Privy Council.

The commission, headed by former Supreme Court Justice Robert Taschereau, was set up by prime minister Mackenzie King after the defection of Igor Gouzenko, a Soviet embassy clerk.

The commission made a public report. But testimony given behind closed doors was withheld.

There have been published reports that the documents refer to the RCMP's top-secret espionage file code-named Operation Featherbed.

Cossitt alleged in the Commons two years ago Commons two years that Featherbed is a cord of high-ranking civil servants suspected of having espionage connections with Communist government representatives.

Security officials have denied that the papers are related in any sense to the Featherbed file. They recommended that the papers be kept secret because persons mentioned in them are still alive and might be subject to unfair criticism.

POSSIBLE USE OF PEACEKEEFING FORCE IN SOUTHERN LEBANON -- CANADIAN PARTICIPATION

Mr. Alex Patterson (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. As the minister has just returned from the Middle East, would he advise the House if any discussions took piace regarding the use of a United Nations peacekeeping force in Southern Lebanon and if any commitment was made as to Canadian participation in such an operation?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Attairs): Mr. Speaker, there were a number of discussions, not only with representatives of various governments in the area but also with representatives of the peacekeeping force themselves, about the pensibility of some involvement in peacekeeping in Southern Lebanon, but these were of a very general attained there was no commitment made other than to say that, as we have always done, if there were a very specific proposal pure days of course we would be glad to deal with it sympathetically.

Because this in the first time I have had an opportunity to give an answer, any I just add that I was pleased to visit with the Canadian forces who are in the peacekeeping service, and I can tell the people that they have every reason to be very proud of them.

Some bon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Patterson: In view of the serious situation in Southern Lebanon, is the minister intending to recommend any new initiatives to the United Nations and, if so, what is the nature of those proposals?

Mr. Jamieson: I do not believe any special or new initiative would serve much useful purpose at the moment. The activities presently underway, as I was glad to note and as I am sure all Mr. Jamieson: I do not believe any special or would serve much useful purpose at the moment.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

SUGGESTED DISCUSSION WITH QUEBUC ON RENEWED FEDERALISM

Mr. I conel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my ques-n is directed to the Minster of State for Federal-Proxincial

Fellowing an opinion poll made public yesterday evening by the CBC French network, 70 per cent of Quebreurs which were questioned opted for a renewed federalism, but the PQ government got 35 per cent of the votes, more than all the opposition parties in Quebec put together. I would like to ask the minister whether he intends to meet his Quebec counterpart, Mr. Moria, in a rear future in order to discuss this matter of renewed federalism?

tion. Marc Lalonde (Minister of State for Federal-Provincial Relations): Mr. Speaker, the government indicated clearly in the Speech from the Throne, that they were in favour of a new federalism in the Canadian system and that specific proposals would be put before the House during the present session which would include some amendments to the Canadia. an constitution.

As for the negotiation with the provinces and particularly with Quebec ministers. I shall remind the hon, member that the Prime Minister is now touring different provinces in Canada, that he has already met several premiers and that he intends to meet the Quebec premier in a few weeks on this subject, just as he met the other premiers. I can tell the hon, member that we are regularly in communication with the departments and the ministers of Quebec who are responsible in for different sectors. If following the meeting between the Quebec premier and the Prime Minister it is necessary to pursue discussions at the ministerial level, of course I shall be sediscussions.

INQUIRY IF MINISTER WHIL MEET HIS COUNTERPART FROM QUIGBEC Oral Onestions

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, could the minister tell the House whether he has already met the Quebec minister. Mr. Morin, to discuss a new formula of renewed federalism? Since the present discussions between the right hon. Prince Minister, and the provincial premiers seem to beaccording to the press for Udo not follow these discussions—confronting discussions, particularly, on the Quebec side, could the minister tell the House whether he has aftendy and of intends to need Mr. Morin to handle this francowed federalism, which every body is expecting:

Hon, Marc I alonde (Minister of State for Poderab-Provincial Relations): Mr. Speaker, the attitude of the option of this government is by no means one of confrontation and I do not quite understand how the hon, member can talk of an attitude of confrontation when we have yet to meet the premier of Quebec. However I must remind the hon, member that it is very difficult to enter into negotiations with a government whose aim is to split this country into two parts and which has very clearly stated that its target was the separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada. As for us, this is a non negotiable option. We are prepared to negotiate a new federalism with Quebec, with substantial changes. But it must be quite clear from the start that what we are talking about is, a new federalism and not the creation of two different countries with some kind of commonic association.

Nfr. Fox: It is a security service file dealing with extremely sensitive matters. It is not my intention to open up all the files of the security services, no matter what the code names might be. I have had the opportunity to review the operation "Fea-

Is the ben gentleman prepared to tell us whether this is true, wheth-er it is government policy that this should be done?

In the event that important legislation on this coursect is not available by the end of the year, and in view of the fact that there has been only slight downward adjustments in world cattle inventories, especially in Australia and New Coaland, does the minister intend to announce temporary in quecas on imported beef for 1978 as he did for 1977?

In a s. Corder-in-council issued in his last days as prime minister, Pierre Trudeau ordered all the police intelligence files on him and his cabinet collegues be sealed for at least 20 years. The files were part of a top secret investigation called "Operation Featherbed" that was started by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in the early 1960s on leading Liberals and civil servants in the country.

Even one former prime minister was not allowed to see all of it since he was:

regarded by some elements of the RCMP as "not secure."

Prime Minister Joe Clark agreed in a letter dated June 2 that Trudeau's final order-in-council would be respected, an undertaking which has angered some Conservative MPs.

nissing, Kaplar govt Secret files r says

Top-secret government documents last signed out by former solicitor-general Allan Lawrence are missing. Robert Kaplan, Lawrence's Liberal successor, said Thursday.

But Lawrence said later he hasn't a clue what documents Kaplan means and said the solicitor-general has never asked him if he knows where they are.

Kaplan's suggestion comes after Lawrence, Progressive Conservative MP for the Ontario riding of Durham-Northumberland, has made a series of allegations about spies who may be operating in government circles. Kaplan, who admitted he hasn't asked Lawrence about the documents, refused to say why he raised the matter at an impromptu news conference or whether the papers are connected to Lawrence's allegations.

He told reporters the material may only be lost and that Lawrence may not be to blame for its disappearance.

"I'm not going to assert that he has those documents.
"I'm only going to assert from the record that they were shown registered out to him and they have not been returned."

He would say only the documents are usually kept by the RCMP security service and are "a collection of ma-

"I don't want to say anything more about it. It's top secret material."

Lawrence said it is strange Kaplan mentioned the missing papers to reporters without having said anything to him first.

Asked whether he knew to what papers Kaplan was referring, Lawrence added: "I haven't the foggiest idea."

Lawrence has made a series of unsubstantiated allegations during the last several months in a concerted campaign to force the government to release documents about spying in Canada.

But the main result so far has been to provoke Prime Minister Trudeau and Kaplan to challenge him to either back up his charges or keep quiet.

'mislaid,' Kaplan says Signed-out secret files

From the Ottawa Bureau of The Globe and Mail

COTTAWA — Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan said yesterday that his conservative predecessor, Allan Lawrence, took a number of top-secret security documents with him after the defeat of the Tory government a year ago.

The RCMP was sent around to retrieve one set of documents but another rieve one set of documents but another set, signed out in Mr. Lawrence's possession, still cannot be accounted for Mr. Kaplan said.

Mr. Lawrence, who has carried out an acrimonous debate in and out of the House for several weeks now over the Liberal Government's refusal to answer questions on national security is alegations were "a crock" and that he doesn't "have the foggiest idea what he is talking about.

The former solicitor-general in the shart-lived Conservative government waid he has about three filing cabinets full of Cabinet and departmental documents from his nine months in power but believes that none of the documents hold classified security mformation and that he is entitled to have them.

Mr. Lawrence also recalled that Michael Dare, director of the RCMP security service, called on him a few weeks after the election to retrieve a particular document that he said touches "in a peripheral way" on some of the allegations he has made recently about former security risks among Canada's diplomatic community. But he says he cannot discuss the contents of the documents any further because that would breach his oath of office.

Mr. Kaplan and Mr. Lawrence engaged in a protracted question of privilege yesterday over whether Mr. Lawrence had broken his oath as a Privy Councillor by making the general allegations he has made recently, but Speaker Jeanne Sauve ruled the matter out of order.

Mr. Kaplan fold reporters that he accepts Mr. Lawrence's word that he has not broken his oath of office and observed that the missing document signed out to Mr. Lawrence "may have been returned and was fost or missaid."

On Wednesday Mr. Lawrence suggested in the Commons that the Soviet spy Harold (Kim) Philby, who penetrated the top echelons of British intelligence, wrote a letter of recommendation for a Canadian security service officer who resigned in 1972.

However, he told reporters later that his information was based on unfounded rumor that he wanted the Government to confirm or deny and that he never saw any RCMP information on the case while he was solicitor general.

Security renewed attacks

By Jim Robb S/-OE /8

Former Conservative Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence attacked the federal government Wednesday for harboring traitors but failed to back up his charge with hard facts, either inside or outside the Commons.

"High government offices" have been infiltrated by individuals "with loyalty to a foreign service," Lawrence said in an exchange with Prime Minsister Trudeau and Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan.

Lawrence has been attacking the Liberal government publicly for its laxity in dealing with security matters, while refusing to name those suspected of being security risks unless the individual in question is dead.

Told by Trudeau that External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan has already examined the case of John Watkins, now dead, a former Canadian ambassador to Moscow, and found Watkins had not been "turned" by the KGB, Lawrence insisted that security problems in appointments to foreign missions still exist.

He then asked Trudeau to investigate "allegations" that former senior RCMP security service officer Lesile James Bennett, retired and living in Australia, was "highly recommended" to the RCMP by Kim Philby.

Philby, a high ranking officer in MI-6, the British secret service, was unmasked as a Soviet double-agent and fled to Moscow in the '60s.

When confronted by reporters outside the Commons, Lawrence's "allegations" became "rumors" he wants the government to investigate.

Senseless link

An expert on RCMP security service matters told The Citizen that the Philby-Bennett link being promoted by Lawrence made no sense.

The expert said that Bennett, British like Philby, didn't join the RCMP special branch, precursor of the security service, until 1954, after service in Britain's intelligence agency that monitors foreign communications.

Philby was pushed out of MI-6 in 1951 because questions about his being a double-agent had already been raised in Great Britain following the Burgess-MacLean defections.

Bennett did, however, retire from the RCMP early in the '70s in a swirl of controversy surrounding reports he might have been a Soviet double-agent, a report he has repeatedly denied.

Lawrence denied a Kaplan charge that he may have breached his cabinet oath of secrecy in raising the Bennett case. Kaplan told reporters security issues have been handled "appropriately" despite Lawrence's charges that the Canadian public should be given more information.

The following concerns an experience I had with your predecessor, Mr. Allan F. LAWRENCE, regarding top secorrespondence from our file code named FEATHER BED.

On November 20th, 1979 I met with Mr. LAWRENCE to provide him with an overview of our FEATHER BED investigation. Accompanying me were Asst. Commr. M.J. SPOONER and S/Sgt. D.B. SMITH. During our discussion Mr. LAWRENCE was shown two pieces of material produced by the RCMP Security Service for internal use. After examining the material Mr. LAWRENCE stated he was going to retain the originals for further study and when told that this material was very sensitive and had to be returned he stated it would be after he had further examined it.

Before was discovered that After the defeat of the Government it was discovered that this material had not been returned to the R.C.M.P. Following this conversation I discussed the matter with my Commissioner who was in full agreement that they should not be held outside the Ministry.

3 & 3 & 3 & In a memorandum from the Department of Justice dated March 2nd, 1981 a legal opinion was given that Mr. LAWRENCE did not have the right to retain such a document unless he had been authorized to do so by a lawful authority such as the Cabinet. Legal Services were unaware that he had received such authority.

The matter was concluded on April 3rd, 1981 when the material in question was handed over to S/Sgt. D.B. SMITH by one of Mr. LAWRENCE's executive assistants in Room 5465 Centree Block. The material was then placed on our file, thirteen months after Mr. LAWRENCE left the office of Solicitor General.

SUN VANCOUVER. B.C. 7 1984 SEARCH FRUITLESS, TRUDEAU SAYS APP

ko papers missing Gouzen K@X

OTTAWA REPP.

Prime Minister Pierre
Elliott Trudeau confirmed. Monday that key documents relating to recent allegations of Soviet spying in Canada in the 1940s are missing from the vaults of the National

Trudeau told the Commons he has been advised that a search for the documents, which stem from the 1945 defection of Soviet embassy cipher clerk Igor Gouzenko, "has proved fruitless thus far."

Allan Lawrence, solicitor-general in the short-lived Progressive Conservative government of Joe Clark, asked whether it was true that papers from the 1946 Taschereau royal commission into the Gouzenko affair and related diaries of former prime minister William Lyon Mackenzie King are missing.

Lawrence said later in an interview it is "more than just coincidence" that the documents have not turned up just when the issue of Soviet espionage has resurfaced. The Conservative MP also charged that numerous other papers have been withdrawn from the archives on the orders of public servants or bureaucrats.

There were published reports over the weekend that the missing documents include a single volume of King's diaries and Privy Council office records of cabinet deliberations relating to

Gouzenko's defection to Canada:

The volume is said to be the only one missing from all the diaries King wrote from 1893 to his death in 1950 and deals with a period in 1945 when the Canadian government and its British and American allies were trying to decide what to do about the

According to London reports, the Russians virtually ran Britain's top counter-espionage agency MI-5 as though it were the London station of the KGB. In fact, the office was the London station in the later Fitties and early Sixties because the MI-5 head, Six Roger Hollis, was a Russian agent, perhaps even the famous Fourth Man that Sir Anthony Blunt was supposed to have been.

Or was he the famous Fifth Man who was never named? Was Kim Philby Hollis's boss or was Hollis Philby's boss? Or was he Bill Haydon, whose exposure by bespectacled master. spy George Smiley as the top Soviet "mole" at the Circus in the John Le Carre writings shat.

in the British secret service?
Indeed, the British secret service?
Indeed, the British secret services, with their old boy networks and cosy upper set relationships, have been so riddled with holes and moles that it has become hard to separate fact from fiction. This probably will not be the last revelation. But the Hollis story is so uncamily close to the Le Carre novels that it's hard to decide whether to take it seriously or to wait with anticipation for the next chapter.

about Hollis are true — and Prime Minister Thatcher thinks there's enough substance in the tale to warrant a full inquiry—then he was the most dangerous spy in British history.

Every bit as dangerous as Bill Haydon was. Or as Canaris was for the Second World War Germans whose spy service was run by the British. Or as dangerous as Oleg Penkovsky, the Soviet spy working for the West in Moscow, and, who was later executed. Or of Igor Gouzenko, the Sovet cypher clerk who defected to Canada and who was interviewed by Hollis.

take none of this seriously:
Maybe we should all just make up a lot of bogus secrets and give them to our various national espionage services and let them trade with each other behind a surreptitious hedgerow in London, or Berlin or Moscow or Washington. That would keep the boys happy and let the politicians run their various countries unconfused by the goings and comings of their secret agents. Perhaps it would be wisest to # in scandal New.twist.

LONDON (CP)—A new twist to the alleged Canadian connection in spy scandals currently rocking the British establishment has emerged from newspaper reports claiming a female employee at the British High Commission in Ottawa was a mysterious Soviet spy, is code-named Elli.

The allegation, which contradicts f claims by British author Chapman Pincher in his controversial book, Their Trade is Treachery, is made by Sunday 1 Times writer Phillip Knightley, who identified the woman as Katleen t

Willsher, a one-time employee in the commission's confidential registry.

The existence of Elli was first disclosed by Igor Gouzenko, the Soviet defector, in 1945. Pincher, says in his book that Elli may have been Sir Roger Hollis, the man who later headed Britain's MI-5 intelligence network.

Knightley says that Willsher identified as Elli in words and pictures in a book by Montgomery Hyde called The Atom Bomb Spies, was arrested on Feb. 15, 1946, pleaded guilty to passing secrets to the Russians and was sentenced to three years in jail.

anada should open

Among important items on the national agenda stalled by the constitutional traffic jam is a freedom of information bill. This legislation would, for the first time, commit the Canadian government to giving its citizens some kind of assured access to certain of its files.

The bill requires a lot of improvement, but the need for an end to unilateral government secrecy has rarely been more clearly demonstrated than by the current spate of allegations concerning security—spies, moles, agents and double-agents.

A lot of these people worked in Canada or were involved in the breaking of the first sensational post-war spy case by the Russian cipher clerk Igor Gouzenko. Chapman Pincher, a veteran of Fleet. Street's circulation wars, is making a lot of money out of his version of what happened in the 1940s and 1950s, and Canada ought to be able to help in unravelling the value of his claims.

Gouzenko, growing old in his assumed identity somewhere in Canada, is a source for some of the material published by Pincher as well as by other writers. He gives interviews from time to time, but whether his memory is reliable or his motives purely historical would be hard to know.

In his book Their Trade Was Treachery, Pincher claims to expose Sir Roger Hollis as a Sovier secret agent. Hollis was chief of MIS, the British counter-intelligence service, from 1956 to 1965 and died in 1973. Dead men tell no tales, nor can they defend themselves.

Blunt confessed

When Anthony Blunt was exposed in another British spy book two years ago, he was alive (he still is). Unable to contest the well-documented charges, he confessed. When Hollis was exposed, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament that he had been investigated at one time but was cleared. The British secret service has suffered so many moles in high places that it would be surprising if any of the top ones had escaped investigation after the treachery of Donald McLean, Guy Burgess and Kim Philby.

Which is not to say that Hollis was a loyal and long-suffering chief like the spymasters of lan Fleming and John Le Carrés George Smiley was investigated and for a time exiled from the Circus.)

It is to say that Pincher does not seem to have proved his case against Hollis, as Andrew Boyle proved his against Blunt in The Fourth Man. This is where the Canadian connection comes in.

Pincher throws a number of Canadian names around in his book, most of them well-worn subjects of public charge or private gossip.

unravel spy charges

The most shocking throwback to the McCarthy era is Pincher's charge that Herbert Norman, who committed suicide when he was Canadian ambassador to Egypt in 1957, was a KGB agent. This charge at the time caused one of the most bitter clashes in the history of Canadian-American relations. It was based on the fact that Norman had been a Communist as a student at Cambridge University, and it had been investigated and dismissed by Canadian security.

U.S. congressional Communist hunters got the story from the FBI, who got it from the RCMP. The accusation was revived when Norman was occupying the sehsitive Cairo post in the aftermath of the Suez crisis. The Canadian reply, as stated by Norman's friend and boss. Lester Pearson, then minister of external affairs, was that Norman was completely clear and completely loyal. He had been hounded to death by the Washington witch-hunters.

Robert Bryce, a college socialist who went on to become deputy minister of finance and then Canada's top civil servant

as secretary to the cabinet, scoffs at the charges against Norman, who was his friend at Cambridge as well as later. He told the Toronto Star last week that Norman had been openly a member of the Communist party at college, like so many other intellectual radicals of the 1930s, but later dropped it.

Homosexual ties

Pincher also accuses John Watkins, Canadian ambassador in Moscow from 1954 to 1956, who died in 1964. Watkins is said to have been victim to a Soviet attempt at homosexual blackmail, but whether the blackmail worked or was resisted has never been officially stated. He was investigated by Leslie James Bennett, the RCMP spychaser who was himself later investigated and then sent into retirement in Australia. Bennett sued Ian Adams for his novel Strait of a Spy, but settled out of court. Nobody outside the innermost inteliligence circles really knows which, if any of these men were working for the other side.

The Prime Minister had been informed that morning that President Truman had announced that he, Attlee and Mackenzie King would meet State's Department had placed Blair House at the disposal of myself and party during our stay in Washington and announcing that there would be a State dinner at the White House on Saturday night, attendance at an Armistice Day service on Sunday morning and later the day to be spent aboard the President's yacht in company with President Truman and Mr. a telegram from Pearson through Wrong stating that the Secretary of Attlee, mentioning dinner with Lord Halifax on Monday or Tuesday; in Washington the following Sunday. Mention of his leaving on Friday which means dinners, etc., in Ottawa; probability, before the week is out, of his addressing both Houses of Parliament before returning to England. This means a pretty strenuous week.

Still suffering from a heavy cold, Mackenzie King landed in New York the next day. His diary for 1945 ends on November 9.

Mackenzie King's diaries for the period from November 10 to December 31, 1945, could not be found after his death, despite repeated searches through all his papers. A skeleton record has been prepared from his engagement sheets from Hansard.

For the visit to Washington, the record has been supplemented, with the permission of the Rt. Hon. L. B. Pearson, by references to his own record of that visit. Pearson was, at the time, Canadian, Ambassador to the United States and, as such, he had a unique opportunity to observe and record Mackenzie King's discussions with President Truman and Prime, Minisse

The basic objective of FEATHER BED was the identification and neutralizing of any influential person working as a high level agent of the RIS against the Canadian Government. With this objective as a starting point it branched out as each subject of investigation was handled on an individual file. By 1969 FEATHER BED had ceased to be an individual file and became dormant in 1975.

ROBE IGNORED

MR 3.1 MM. TORONTO

Many of the scores of civil servants fingered as suspected Soviet agents or secret Communists by Operation Featherbed between 1958 and 1972 still wield power.

The massive RCMP subversive-ferreting operation concluded the departments of finance, external affairs and immigration were heavily infiltrated by members of Communist secret cells.

And, in the nature of the subversion game, those who retried probably left hand-picked successors, meaning nothing really has changed until today.

Featherbed's search-and-pinpoint study lasted 14 years but its alarming findings were shrugged off. CWL By ROB REGULY Staff Writer Featherhed grew out of the U.S. Senate internal security committee's hearings and the resultant FBI cracking of the Silvermaster atomic spy ring. Elizabeth Bentley, secretary of the U.S. Communist Party, had been the network's courier and confessed all.

Nathan Silver master's web included high-level U.S. civil servants, among them U.S. Treasury Secretary Harry Dexter White and the state department's diversity of the state department's diversity of the state department's diversity of the state department's diversity of the state department's diversity of the state department's diversity of the state department's diversity of the state department's diversity of the state department's diversity dive department's Alger Hiss. FBI information suggested there was a counterpart network in Canada. ALGER HISS Part of the web Featherbed (from birds of a feather) quickly found a dozen suspected members of the equivalent of the Silvermaster network in the Canadian civil service hierarchy. Curiously, RCMP top brass forbade interrogation of the "12 apostles," as they were called. But they were put under surveillance and wiretapped.

the deputy minister and his influential wife. They became the target of a special surveillance effort code-named Operation. Apache. Yet, he is still in government.

Featherhed also identified three prominent union movement officials as secret party members. One is a union president, another a vice-president and a third is research director for one of Canada's biggest unions.

Perhaps the most ominous Featherhed finding from a security standpoint was the conclusion that O.D. Skelton, the revered "father of the civil service," was a Comintern agent recruited in 1923.

One curious episode recounted in Featherbed files involves regular visits by two civil servants, one who later became a deputy minister and the other head of a government agency, to a Rideau St. electronics shop. After their visits, jointly and singly, to the manager's office, a card would be put in the window. It signalled a live letter drop was ready for pickup by Soviet Embassy military spies.

Missing Material FEATHERBED

Yesterday afternoon (24th February) I had a call from the former Solicitor General, Mr. Allan Lawrence, regarding missing material (the two Featherbed documents left with him on 79-11-20, our refers) Mr. Lawrence confirmed that he had found the documents in question. He wished to retain them for his own purposes. He assured me that they were in his personal safe custody and protected by the appropriate Top Secret storage. I questioned the desirability of this course, however he was quite adamant he wished to retain them and would responsible for the documents.

Following this conversation I discussed the matter with the Commissioner who was in full agreement that they should not be held outside the Ministry. The Commissioner intends to discuss the matter further with Mr. Lawrence and, dependent upon the results of this meeting, discuss the matter further with our Minister, Mr. Kaplan. An.

Less than a month before he was

University of Toronto, Donald Frederick Forster, 49, died suddenly of a heart attack in Toronto yesterday.

Forster, who had been president of the University of Guelph since 1975, was to have completed his term at the end of August.

On Sept. 1, he would have taken over Canada's biggest university, which has a $400 million budget

He was a member of the Economic Council of Contair Universities and former member of the board of directors of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada.

Although he described himself with a grin as "a country boy" he was born in Toronto's east end in 1934 and lived with his parents on Grandview Ave. until his father, Frederick, was sent to Chicago during World War II to convert a milking machine factory into a precision ball-bearing plant.

He had acted as economic consultant for both Tanzania and Papua New Guinea, and was consultant of an economic text and many articles on economics and politics.

Tributes poured in from close friends and colleagues.

Close friends

J. Stefan Dupre, professor of political science at the University of Toronto, said Forster was "one of my very dearest and closest friends."

Dupre, who is also chairman of the Royal Commission on Asbestos in Ontario, said Forster was responsible for bringing him to the University of Toronto 20 years ago, when he joined the faculty as an associate professor in the department of political economy.

William C. Winegard, who was president of the University of Guelph for eight years before Forster took over, said it was just." a terrible, terrible shock.

"Here was a man who was just finishing a marvellous job at the University of Guelph and was about to take on one of the most about to take on one of the most difficult jobs as president of the University of Toronto. And suddenly, it's all over."

Winegard said that he and Forster used to joke frequently that Forster would outlast him at the University of Guelph.

"He was going to outlast me by two months but as it has turned out he did it by only one month," he said.

Paul Gilmor, provost of the University of Guelph, said he had Known Forster since he came to Guelph as president in 1975 and had worked with him closely over the years.

'I knew him both personally and professionally," he said. "One of the things that stands out in my mind is that he was an outstanding abitionalist. He had a real concern and love for his country."

As an active member of the Economic Council of Canada, he had maintained very close connections with a wide range of political feaders as well as leaders in other fields, Gilmor said.

"In my view, he was a generative man who was concerned about the future, concerned about the future, concerned about providing opportunities to people with potential, whether students, staff or faculty." Gilmor said.

Gilmor said Forster was always very proud of the university.

"He was going back to Toronto because of his sense of loyalty and obligation to his alma mater," he said.

Dave Murray, dean of the college of arts at Guelph, called Forster's death "a terrible sheck and

"He was a man of very many accomplishments," Murray said. "These included economics, history, and art, particularly Eskimo and Indian art, which he collected.

Supported arts

"All of those who knew him at Guelyh will miss him very much," he said.

He was known particularly in Guelph for his efforts to draw the community and the university closer together.

One of his proud accomplishments was sponsoring the establishment of the Macdonald Stewart Art Gallery in Guelph, an undertaking that involved the city of Guelph, the County of Wellingston, the Wellington County Board of Education and the university.

Forster in 1970 spent several months in Tanzania helping the government set up a system for evaluating the benefits and disadvantages of development projects.

identification ng as a high The basic objective of FEATHER BED was the identification and neutralizing of any influential person working as a higlevel agent of the RIS against the Canadian Government. With this objective as a starting point it branched out as each subject of investigation was handled on an individual file. By 1969 FEATHER BED had ceased to be an individual file and became dormant in 1975.

the This would appear to be an appropriate time for the Solicitor General to call in Mr. Tom COSSITT and explain him FEATHER BED is none of the things he envisages and advise him to start acting as a responsible member of the Government.

NATIONAL SECURITY

PURPOSES OF "FEATHERBED FILE" AND NAMES CONTAINED THEREIN

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Solicitor General concerning the so called "featherbed file" which has been featured again in the past few days in the press, and which the security services have claimed over a period of time does not contain names of members of the House of Commons.

I should like to ask the minister whether he can tell the House the general nature of the names that are mentioned in the "featherbed file" other than those of members of Parliament, or can he give us a general description of the purposes of the file and whether or not he has seen it, requested to see it, or intends to see it?

Hon. Allan Lawrence (Soliciter General and Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the whole question of the "featherbed file" and the implications arising from it are now under the intense consideration of the government.

At a meeting with the Solicitor General today, the Director General was directed to up-date the attached briefs. A brief on Bernard OSTRY was also requested.

Should you have any additional information of senior public servants with communist sympathies or affiliation a brief should be prepared.

The Minister will be coming to Headquarters shortly to review some of our files and any pracrity you cagive the above would be appreciated. Your reply should be directed to myself.

MPs told Teather Dec. Dovernment

TOM COSSITT Wanted some answers

OTTAWA — (CP) — The government is examining a secret RCMP security file on "Operation Featherbed" — said to concern the private lives of public figures — Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence told the Commons yesterday.

He said he began to look into Feath-erbed soon after the Conservative gov-ernment took office in June.

Lawrence did not reply to a request from Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds-Grenville, Ont.) to tell the MPs the purpose of Featherbed, the names in the RCMP file, and who had asked to see it.

Cossitt first raised the matter two years ago, saying Featherbed was an investigation of journalists covering Parliment, at least six senior civil servants, and a cabinet minister suspected of espionage.

A Toronto newspaper said in 1977 that the Featherbed file was started in 1968 — the year former prime minister Pierre Trudeau first came to power — when RCMP security officers obtained information arising from the defection of Igor Gouzenko. a Soviet spy ring.

Another newspaper said at the time that the file contained details of Trudeau ordered the operation to be halted when he learned of it in 1972.

Former Solictor-General Francis Fox confirmed in 1977 that the file existed, but said he could not discuss it because it dealt with "extremely sensitive matters."

During the last five years there has been considerable interest shown by the press and the Member of Parlament from Leeds-Grenville in one of our files codenamed FEATHER BED. The M.P. has received from someone, misleading information as to the objectives of the investigation and refuses to believe otherwise. Since he is again tabling numerous questions concerning this file I am outlining the general nature of the concept and attaching as Appendix "A", a chronological outline of the developments of the concept and some investigations that are an offshoot Of FEATHER BED.

to examine possible USSR (KGB) infiltration This file was opened in an attempt to examine possible Committee of State Security of the USSR (KGB) infiltrat of the Canadian Government along parallel lines to the Harry DEXTER-WHITE, Alger HISS pattern observed in the U.S.A. The British also had similar experiences of KGB penetration of their government system. Common factors identified included the fact that:

- practically all were college graduates of the 1930s and at one time or another had some association with the Communist Party (a)
- each they hired one another, recommended eacther's transfers and vouched for each others loyalty. 9
- many had common outside interests and could be documented with at least one, and generally several other Communists Ô

The penetration of Canadian Government Departments by hostile intelligence services is an ongoing concern of the RCMP Security Service and will continue to receive the necessary attention.

suspicions The making public of any document from the FEATHER BED file would be regretted since it could lead to unfounded suspicion and to the defamation of character of innocent people. Additionally it would defeat our security measures which have always championed the need for privacy and respect for the always cham individual.

Of in attempting to find out what FEATHER BED is about. He has stated it is surveillance and information gathering on senior members of federal cabinet (1977); on press gallery members who held extreme views to the left or right mat the political spectrum; surveillance of Members of Parliament; and mainly the political and personal life of the former Prime Minister. None of these are correct

The basic objective of FEATHER BED was the identification and neutralizing of any influential person working as a high level agent of the RIS agaimst the Canadian Government. With this objective as a starting point it branched out as each subject of investigation was handled on an individual file. By 1969 FEATHER BED had ceased to be an individual file and became dormant in 1975.

This would appear to be an appropriate time for the Solicitor General to call in Mr. Tom COSSITT and explain to him FEATHER BED is none of the things he envisages and advise him to start acting as a responsible member of the Government.

It is also suggested that all leads be checked against the Venona carding system. In all cases, negative checks will again be retained by the Co-ordinator for reference—positive traces will be reviewed and all data, whether positive or negative, will be put on a check sheet and passed to the co-ordinating group. Finally, all positive leads will be correlated with the criteria as laid out in the first paragraph, with unresolved leads being recorded in a catalogue for future operational priority. Minister have always been important—— witness Tom Kent in the early Pearson years, or Alvin Hamilton during Diefenbaker's reign — but they have never been as powerful as they are today. Pearson tended to accept advice from all comers, which is why so many of his policies were confused and contradictory; Diefenbaker accepted only reinforcement of his own views. Trudeau tends to look for advice from a single group of likeminded men, and he will accept views The men who surround the Prime that run contrary to his own if they are well argued and put forward by

His Proceeding and excellent condensers, his Proceeding constructing charts and graphs to caperalize information; he gets a lot of president about the charts, but he constructions and the charts. The Prime Minister is not a patient, steady worker; he operates in bursts of furious intellectual energy. He needs a lot of sleep and a lot of privacy, a regular bloc of time to be himself and not the prime minister. Therefore, the way advice comes to sulize information; he gets a lot of Pikidding about the charts, but he communicated a lot of points with them.

Trudeau believes in delegating autority to those who have proved they a can handle it, with results that may be spillustrated by one small incident some a lilustrated by one small smal vested in a circle of fewer than three of Ottawa on a trip, and had gone to dozen people who comprise Trudeau's bed for an afternoon map, when a cown talent pool. The men in that pool cabinet minister called, demanding to the period on pages 36-39 — will object to my aide said that was not possible. The assume of the word "power," contending minister explained that a security per that they are only advisers. But the matter had come up; a decision had right to tender advice to the Prime to be made at once. The aide asked critical is power if that advice refor details and gave a decision. The had a policy to push, I would rather have decision stuck. Since that time, both rather and speak on his wave— tive of their respective powers. That and call him "tu" instead of incident could not happen again to my "vous" in French — than the mouths the decision now would be fun. neled through the proper channels, but it would still, in all likelihood, be determined by the aide most knowledgeable in the case.

The cliché that Canada is moving toward an American style of govern-

× likely to forsake the advantages of a responsible cabinet, whose members are elected and can be punished by the public; no sign that the Prime Minister wants to split his office from parliament, as the presidency is separated from Congress, or abandon the responsibility of guiding his own programs through the House of Commons. But there is a move — you could call it the Modified American Plan — to strengthen both the PMO and the Privy Council into something very like the White House corps of unelected experts, and to use those staffs, like the White House staff, as stroubleshooters, public-relations exfall, it was no diplomat, but Ivan Head; the Prime Minister's Legislative Assistant, who flew to Lagos to negotiate with the Nigerian government. When Ottawa located the new Montreal Airport at Ste. Scholastique, over the objections of Quebec, it was no cabinet minister, but Pierre Levaster Regional Adviser in the PMO, who flew down to break the news to Premier Bertrand. When Trudeau deal of student unrest this t was no party official, but ¥ les Haché, Vanother regional cer, who went down to scout troubleshooters, public-relations experts and information sources. When Canada was trying to get permission for some control of the services o rary degree at Monc-where there had been ment is not strictly accurate. There is no sign the Trudeau government is couldn't make up his mind about ac-cepting an honorary degree at Monc-ton University, where there had been Jean-Eudes I the scene. Every one of these moves made sense, but every one emphasized the increasing importance of the Prime Minister's advisers, not merely as sources of information, but as his personal representatives.

This change, a response to the increasing complexity of government, has been in process for some time. Trudeau didn't invent it, but he has rationalized and refined it to the point where the PMO has become a little bureaucracy of its own, complete with an organization chart and requirements. an organization chart and regular meetings of department heads to discuss administrative problems.

PMO than there are in uncomposed by November 1961, Prime Minister Diefenbaker had a staff of 15 people, many of them clerks who answered the mail, and an annual payroll of $97,920; four years later, Prime Minister Pearson had 21 aides, seven of whom were engaged in correspondence, and a payroll of $197,492; to day, Prime Minister Trudeau has 34 aides, 13 of them on the letter-writing the staff of the staff of $406,085. There are more people today in the PMO than there are in the cabinet. In November 1961, Prime Minister etail, and a payroll of $40 here are 28 cabinet ministers.

for the Maritimes, and one for the west — serve the double role of feeding information and complaints from the regions to the Prime Minister and helping him to get his views out to the country. (The Quebec Desk officer, Jean Prieur, is also responsible for serving the constituents in the Prime Pearson.) Whenever the Prime Minister leaves Ottawa on official business, he takes along a little black book, prepared by the regional desk for the area he is to visit, which outlines local problems and concerns. He may not always heed the little black book—he didn't when he reconstitutions. There has been a change in kind as well as in size with the establishment of regional desks in the PMO. These desks — there is one for Quebec, one for the Maritimes, and one for the f Jean Prieur, is and serving the constituents in the Prime Minister's riding of Mount Royal, just as Executive Assistant Mary Macdonary Afrer Algonia East for he didn't when he refused to discuss oil policy in Calgary earlier this year but he ignores it at his peril.

The MPs resent the regional desks charge of as an invasion of their own responsi-bility, and they were able to keep an Ontario desk from being created. Pierre Levasseur, who is in charge of the desks, says this is because the MPs don't realize that the operation is

With the growth in the PMO has come an increase in size and strength come an increase in size and strength come an increase in size and strength of the Privy Council, the PMO behind the padded doors of parliament's East Block.

Like the PMO, the Privy Council has people. Technically, the PMO behind the padded every budget freeze. It grew in staff this year from 211 to 288 policy that makes good sense from me an interview. Despite their low visibility, it is possible to build a picture of the hierarchy around the Prime Minister. There is no place on my chart, on pages 36-39, for the cabinet as a whole, yet it does play an important role in decision-making. It is, after all, a debating society composed of articulate, willful men used to argument and chaired by a Prime Minister used to extracting the best from every argument. So, while the cabinet as such does not appear on my chart, in your mind it should fit somewhere between the Inner Circle and The Operators.

In the Inner Circle, I have placed only four men, two of them cabinet ministers, Jean Marchand and Gérard Pelletier, and three of them personal and longtime friends of Trudeau: Marchand. Pelletier and Marc Lalonde was one of a handful of Quebec intellectuals, along with Trudeau, who signed a 1964 political manifesto rejecting ideology and embracing pragmatism, a manifesto Trudeau, brongusty took very much to deau obviously took very much to heart. Lalonde is a good deal like Trudeau — cool, quick, humorous, K highly intelligent and complex. Like an intellectual, a strong federalist and an intensely pragmatic politician. W once worked as execution which perch he campaigned quietly but effectively for Trudeau's elevation Pearson, later as constitutional to power. Next to the Prime Minister, he is probably the single most impor-

haps the most visible of all Trudeau's advisers. Their association goes back a long way. Pelletier and Trudeau met as students, and Marchand was drawn into their circle during the strike at Asbestos, Quebec, in 1949. where Marchand worked as a union organizer, Pelletier as a reporter and Trudeau as a kind of free-lance agitator who made stirring specches to the strikers. Pelletier and Trudeau were associated in founding the intellectual magazine Cité Libre, and all three without accepting the other two as well. Now Trudeau is the leader of the trio, but they are still a trio. They don't agree about everything; but when they do, as on the Official Languages Act or NATO, they make a formidable combination. gazine Cité Libre, and all three re caught up in the political fernt of Quebec's Quict Revolution. ey came into politics together in 55 as the Three Wise Men, when federal Liberals wanted Marchand, but found they couldn't get him Pelletier nt man in government. Marchand and Pello

The fourth member of the Inner Circle is Gordon Robertson, a tall, slim, handsome man with steel-grey hair and an unobtrusive manner, who can be seen at every constitutional conference sitting just behind the Prime Minister's right shoulder, ready for instant consultation. Robertson has a number of titles — Clerk of the Privy Council, Chairman of the Continuing Committee on the Constitution, Secretary to the Calsinet — and a massive influence not only on the Prime Minister but also on the civil service, which regands him as a kind of Lay Pope of the memo set. He has been a civil servant since 1941 and is everything a Mandarin should be: discrete, intelligent and inflexibly honest. He is one of four men — the others are Marc Lalonde, Pruss Secretary is. Roméo LeBlanc and Deputty Cabinet ke Secretary Marshall Crowe — who meet with the Prime Minister for half an hour every morning. If notities is

This Inner Circle is rimmed by two other rings, which I have called The Operators — the men who gather information and help to carry out poli-

The Operators are, for the most part, on the PM's own staff.

They are the young professionals, such as Pierre Levasseur, a thickset, genial but tough-minded graduate in business administration from Laval and the University of Western Ontario. Levasseur worked for the Quebec December 1987 Department of Education, then for the Liberal Party in Quebec, and was one of the early organizers of the Trudeau-for-Leader campaign, though he hardly knew Trudeau at the time. They are the loyalists, such as Tim Porteous, the blond, slender, handsome young Montrealer who looks as if he had just stepped out of a collar both were on tour, and traveled to Tahiti together for a holiday just before Trudeau announced his candidaley for the leadership. Their relationship is a close, personal one. ad, and whose qualifications as the Prime Minister's chief speech-writer include co-authorship of the McGill musical comedy, My Fur Lady. Porteous and Trudeau met in Africa, where is a close, personal one.

Porteous is getting help with the speech-writing from another old friend, Roger Rolland, who bounced around Europe with Trudeau, roomed with him in Paris, where Rolland was picking up his PhD in literature, and joined him in student pranks. Rolland is a quick, amiable, all-round man, whose careers include teaching at the University of British Columbia, broadcasting, administration and politics.

The Task Force people are not so much friends and confidents as ex-much friends and confidents as experts, whose opinions the Prime Minister values. They include such disparate men as Carl Goldenbergy the short, quietly brilliant Montreal lawyer who has been giving dispassionate advice to governments for more than two decades, Eric Kierans, the Postmaster General, who has thrust himself into the circle of advisers by the sheer noise and force of his views and gives him a powerful say r constitutional talks not personality, and Albert Johnson, a pleasant-spoken former adviser to the CCF government in Saskatchewan, whose expertise in the area of public whenever finance

Taking all the circles at once, a number of facts become apparent. There are no women, for one thing (there are, of course, women on the Prime Minister's staff, but their role in the formation of policy is miniin the formation of policy is minimal), and the men share a number of common characteristics. Knowing something about them helps to explain something of the government's moves, or lack of moves, to date. There is not much social fire in the government's record, nor would you expect revolutionary zeal from the well-paid, well-housed bourgeois technocrats represented here. Although housing is a major problem in Canada, the Trudcau administration's painful problems of jurisdictional conflict with the provinces. Ottawa has paid a good deal of attention to Quebec, very little to the west or to the Maritimes. Well, count the Quebeckers again, and see where they fit in the power structure. I am not making something sinister of this; it is natural for the Prime Minister to surfound himself with Quebeckers and ould exfound himself with Quebeckers and long past the time when French Canada received special attention, but this overloading of advisers from one region does induce a certain myopia to-ward the rest of Canada. only move in this area came not as policy, but as reaction, when Transport Minister Paul Hellyer quit in a huff, and that is what you would expect with 15 lawyers to point out the

The growing power of the advisers has aroused envy and unrest in Ottawa, both in the Liberal caucus, whose members fear they are being bypassed, and in the Opposition parties, which object because there is no way to call these shadowy figures to public And no one man can possibly have all the knowledge on which to act; there must be, by the very nature of mod-ern government, a body of experts the account. But it is easier to point to the dangers than to suggest any reme-dy. $ S My personal theory of KING destroying the diary does not stand up if the recollections of Edouard HANDY are correct that the missing diary was there when he (HANDY) left Laurier House in 1955. However, this conflicts with Jack PICKERSCILL, a special assistant to KING, saying, the disappearance of the crucial diary was discovered soon after KING's death (22 July 1950) and that the house was searched by HANDY and a caretaker "and the police tried to find it." Missing MacKenzie King Diary November 10 to December 31, SUBJECT OBJET

I refer to our conversation concerning the article in the Sunday Star, "The Mystery of a PM's missing diary" 84-12-30.

A check of files fails to reflect any mention of Edouard HANDY, confidential secretary of MacKenzie KING ever being interviewed concerning the missing diary. HANDY is not recorded in our indices.

Attached for your information is the most recent summary we have on file concerning this matter (1981-01-22) and a copy of page 96, volume 3 of "The Mackenzie KING Record 1945-1946"

The 1972 figures are interesting in that the 74 active files (tab #2) comes from material left with the Sol. Gen, after verbal briefing (tab #3) on Feather Bed. At the Minister's insistence this material was left with him. Policy and Security Branch must have subtracted these 74 from the 350 to come up with a total of 286 inactive files. Again they have made a subtraction error. By this method 276 would be the correct number of inactive files.

In May 1980, after the defeat of the Government we noted the material left with the Sol. Gen. had never been returned. This touched off a search which finally located the material 1981-02-25 (tab # 5). A legal opinion was obtained as to whether Mr. Lawrence had the right to retain our material (tab #6) and the matter was concluded on 1981-04-03 when I picked up the material from Mr. Lawrence's Centre Block office. This detail is mentioned because if the Police and Security Branch have retained copies of this material they should not have. At the time they were searching they stated they could not find any trace of the material. This again is where the figure 74 came from.

N

It may also be of interest to note at this time another incident that occured with FEATHER BED material that went over to the Minister and was subsequently returned (see tab #4).

If there is a requirement to be more precise and list number of files by year this can be done, I thought by putting them in a ten year frame 50's, 60's and 70's it would tighten the letter up to manageable and readable size.

Personally I cannot see anything wrong other than they have taken 1979, where we stated we had conducted a "review" as being the year the 136 files were destroyed.

The Research section of the RCMP Security and Intelligence Branch was then allotted the codeword assignment "FEATHER-BED". This research review was to determine if infiltration of Canadian government departments had occured along parallel lines to the Alger HISS, Harry DEXTER-WHITE patterns in the USA. These people had been exposed in the Senate Internal Sub-Committee report of August 1953.

In May 1959 a memorandum reveals that the Research section has not had any time for the FEATHERBED enquiry due to more current duties. FEATHER BED file has been dormant, except a repository for questions and publicity relating to concept. (2)1975-Present

Of A member of Parliament has been quite vocal in attempting to find out what FEATHER BED is about. He has stated it is surveillance and information gathering on senior members of federal cabinet (1977); on press gallery members who held extreme views to the left or right and the political spectrum; surveillance of Members of Parliament; and mainly the political and personal life of these None of the political and promer mer Prime Minister. correct. former

The basic objective of FEATHER BED was the identification and neutralizing of any influential person working as a high level agent of the RIS against the Canadian Government. With this objective as a starting point it branched out as each subject of investigation was handled on an individual file. By 1969 FEATHER BED had ceased to be an individual file and became dormant in 1975.

This would appear to be an appropriate time for the Solicitor General to call in Mr. Tom COSSITT and explain to him FEATHER BED is none of the things he envisages and advise him to start acting as a responsible member of the Government.
